- Notes -
 - in 2009 by Federico Lencioni & Francisco Sarabia to plant a vineyard in their vast highland ranch. They had noted for years that this parcel was consistently covered in fog and breezy throughout the morning, two traits that made it ideally suited for a vineyard site. Since then it has been a bit of a fairytale success story for these ranchers turned winemakers whose grapes have been sold and used in wines that have consistently won top awards in every competition they entered. Selling grapes was never their plan A, and in 2018, when the vineyards had reached a level of maturity that they felt confident in, they started making their own wine.
 - Winemaker/enologist Sergio Heras, has been making wine Northern Baja for over a decade and is one of its most well-respected winemakers
 - Today they make 4 wines: They use certified organic yeast to make the Rosé and the Tinto while the Mi prima Vera is fermented on ambient yeast and left unfired and unfiltered as a natural wine.
 - The vast highland plain where the winery is located has better water reserves that most of the viticultural regions of Northern Baja, and it is accessed by a pump powered by the wind. That's right, the windmill that appears on their logo is an image of the windmill that was erected nearly 100 years ago and still serves to pump up the water from the underground aquifer for use in the winery. Sustainable? Yes.

2025 Blanco - Valle Seco

Tasting Notes and Drinking Window:

Harvested by hand from high-elevation vineyards in Valle Seco, this vibrant blend combines the freshness and structure of Sauvignon Blanc with the floral lift and bright acidity of Muscatel. Aromas of citrus blossom, white flowers, and orchard fruit lead to a lively, refreshing palate and crisp finish.

The fruit comes from a 2,000-hectare family ranch that has been farmed for more than 70 years and is now in the hands of its fourth generation. First planted to vines in 2008, the property reflects a deep commitment to both agriculture and stewardship of the land.

Distinctive and energetic, this wine captures the spirit of Valle Seco and the family behind it.
